EL PASO HERALD

Established April, 1881. The El Paso Horald includes also, by absorption and succession. The Dally News, The Telegraph. The Telegram The Tribune.

The Graphic, The Sun, The Advertiser, The Independent.

The Journal, The Republican The Bulletin.

MEMBER ASSOCIATED PRESS AND AMER. NEWSP. PUBLISHERS' ASSOC.

Dedicated to the service of the people, that no good cause shall lack a champion, and that evil shall not thrive unopposed.

The Dally Heraid is issued six days a week and the Weekly Heraid is published every Thursday, at El Paso. fexas; and the Sunday Mall Edition is also sent to Weekly Subscribers.

Editorial Rooms 2020
Secrety Reporter 1019
Advertising department 118 RERALD TELEPHONES.

Daily Herald, per month, 6ec; per year, 27. Wackly Herald, per year, 22.

The Daily Herald is delivered by carriers in El Paso, List El Paso, Fort Bliss and Towns. Texas, and Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, at 60 cents a month.

A subscriber desiring the address on his paper changed will please state in his communication both the old and the new address.

Subscribers falling to get The Herald promptly should call at the office or telephone No. 115 before 6:30 p. m. All complaints will receive prompt atten-

CIRCULATION. The Herald bases all advertising contracts on a guarantee of more than twice the circulation of eny other El Paso, Arizona, New Mexico or New Mexico or west Texas pa-per. Dally average exceeding 10,000.

The Association of American Advertisers has examined and certified to the circulation of this publication. The detail nation is on file at the York office of the Association. No Toposemaii Secretary.

HERALD TRAV-ELING AGENTS. Persons solicited to subscribe for The Herald should beware of imposters and should not pay money to anyone unless he can show that he is legally authorized by the El Paso Herald.

Practical Talks To Farmers

HE HERALD'S farm page, conducted by H. H. Schutz, assistant professor of agronomy (the broad science of developing agricultural resources) in the New Mexico college of agriculture and mechanic crts, has already achieved distinction as the only authoritative compendium of agricultural information available to farmers in this valley where conditions are in a measure peculiar. For many years The Herald has sought to build up its farming department. But it has been difficult to procure material for that department of the newspaper that would be thoroughly applicable to actual conditions in this valley. It is easy enough to get material for a farm page that is based on experience in other states at a distance; there are numerous syndicates which make a business of supplying articles on farming to newspapers; none of these services has ever appealed to the management of The Herald as worth the space and money they would require, for they possess no local application. The topics discussed in these foreign services are of comparatively remote interest to our own southwest,, and farmers in this region would find it difficult to apply many of the principles therein set forth.

It is with the view of givnig to the farmers of the southwest a newspaper cervice particularly adapted to their needs, that The Herald has procured the services of a well equipped practical thoroughly trained agriculturist to conduct this page. Illustrating the broad field which is covered in the special service for the benefit of the farmer readers of The Herald a mere recital of the topics treated during the month of July is of interest. There have been authoritativ and detailed articles within the last few weeks on the selection of wheat, the effect of alfalfa feeding on various farm animals, the feeding and care of poultry, the need of farmers for poultry and the great opportunities open to agriculturists in this branch of the business, the culture of peaches, the value of pumping plants as supplementary to irrigation, the raising and marketing of cantaloups, the effect of soil cultivation on growth of crops and quantity of water needed, the value of poultry raising on dry farms, examples of successful farming in this valley, the science and art of grading wheat, raising turkeys for the market, the art of properly starting orchard trees, the efficiency of irrigation pumping plants, chicken foods, chicken diseases, etc., etc.

In Saturday's paper this week will appear a very important article on hog raising in irrigated regions. Prof. Schutz has made a special study of this subject and is well qualified to advise the farmers of the southwest upon the economic importance of hog raising.

This is a division of farm management that is almost totally neglected in El Paso county. There are fewer four footed hogs in this valley than there are three legged burros. It does not reflect much credit on the capacity of a farmer as a manager when he neglects such a very important branch of farming as raising hogs. In his Saturday articl Prof. Schutz will advise the raising of barley for the purpose of feeding hogs and this applies to irrigated regions and dry farming regions with equal force. Field peas and alfalfa are also good, but Prof. Schutz has excellent authority for maintaining that barley in this valley may prove to be the most economical hog feed. Says he, "It is cheaper to raise barley under irrigation than corn in the Mississippi valley states, and it will produce more

In his Saturday article Prof. Schutz will cover the questions of hog feeding, relection of strains, finishing for the market, hardening the flesh, raising hogs for different purposes, importance of abundant clean water, preparation of feed, and other questions of vital importance to the successful hog raiser.

The efforts of The Herald to meet the demand of southwestern farmers for informatoin of special local interest are widely appreciated.

The United States biological survey has been studying the birds of California in their relation to the interest of the farmers. Of all the birds common in the state only four species are regarded as harmful to growing crops out of proportion to the good they do. These are the linnet, California jay, stellar jay, and red-breasted sapsucker. The biological survey bulletin lays great stress on the fact that all the damage the birds may do to agricultural and horticultural products is small as compared with the benefits they confer by destroying harmful insects and seeds of noxious weeds.

The Way to Win Support.

THE Republicans of El Paso county have put in the field a strong ticket of good clean men. The local Republican party has for years demonstrated forcibly its right to active participation in governmental affairs by choosing for its nominees without exception men of high character, good standing in the community, and recognized fitness for public office.

Clean political methods as exemplified by the nominations and by the party activities of the Republicans locally deserve recognition and support. Balance well maintained between the two great parties is desirable in county and state affairs no less than nationally. There is no good reason why the Republican county ticket should not poll a very substantial share of the total vote this fall, and win the election as to some offfices at least.

In this community there is no foundation for the slightest prejudice against voting the Republican ticket, and it becomes, or should become, solely a question of choosing the best man for the offices and the most progressive and widely serviceable program of party principles and administration.

The investigation at Palestine, Texas, discloses that a number of the negro victims were young boys and that the mob in squads of 20 or more went through the country roads, the woods, and the village, firing upon every black skin they saw. - There seems to have been no armed attack or retaliation by the negroes. and no provocation for the outrages by the white mob. Many of the white men of the country who were not members of the mob were so terrorized that they feared to give relief to the wounded negroes and left them lying in the sun to die. The whole episode is one of the most disgraceful that every blotted the history of this state.

There will be a good roads exhibit at the Dallas fair this fall; the suggestion is one that the El Paso fair managers would do well to follow. El Paso county has developed a system of road building likely to become a model for the whole Unitd States. Miniature samples showing the methods of construction accompanied by models and photographs would prove extremely interesting to all visitors both from the city and the surrounding territory. It is a great opportunity t opush along the educational campaign for good roads.

I I NCLE WALT'S Denatured Poem

THE husband went home to his wife when his day's toil was through. "You're grieved," he said, "my love, my life—tell me what worries you! Something has happened, that I know, to fret you and annoy; now let your husband share your woe, as he has shared your joy." The wife replied: "I'm nervous, dear I fear I'm all unstrung; so do not mind my vagrant tear, or my complaining tongue. The little mishaps of the day, just fill my heart with dread; I try to laugh my griefs away, but tears will come instead. Our little Johnnie went to play with others, on the street; an automobile came that way, and cut off both his And then our little Sarah Jane, went out to buy a hat, and some one, from an aeroplane, fell down and mashed Copyright, 1910, by George Matthews Adams.

Walk Mason

Beatrice Fairfax Midsummer Love and Its Many Dangers

bring their little ships safely home to port these midsummer days. Girls may pass the winter season without sweethearts and beaux, but very few girls go through the summer without at least one sentimental epi-It's a sort of midsummer madness which gets in the blood. Many of you my girls, will fall in ove this summer. With some it will be the great and abiding love of your lives; with others it will be but a passing infatuation-but with all it will be real enough, while it And in either case, it should be ooked upon seriously. If it is real love, may God bless you and help you to steer your little boat of happiness into a safe harbor.

Avoid this Danger, Girls.

If it is imitation love, may God grant ou sense to distinguish betwien false and the true, and to avoid the vorst fate that can befall any girl-a loveless marriage.

moonlit summer evening puts a great glamour on commonplace things. It can glorify a flirtation into a very good imitation of real love.

Try to keep your wits, girls, even and the whole moonlit world is singing Ask yourself if what you feel is love, or some mere physical attraction, which nickly wears off. When you fall in love, you want it to e the love of your life, for you know. dears, this falling in love is a strange, perplexing sort of joy, as troublous as it is sweet goodness, I am married to John; I love him devotedly and hope to all my life; but I could not stand falling in love with him over again. It nearly killed me.

Despair as Well as Bliss. "Weren't you happy?" I asked, in surprise. Yes, of course I was; but I was also miserable. One day in the heights of bliss, the next in the depths of de-spair—now I am in a heaven of peace. I love him and he loves me; all we have do is to hold each other's love. During the summertime a girl meets many strange men. She goes away on visits or a vacation; she strangers and compeled to judge these men friends by herself-that is, without the guidance of her mother's opinion.

There is one infallible rule to follow. girls, and that is: The instant a man gives you the slightest reason to doubt his honor and sincerity have nothing more to do with him.

Remember, also, that men, as well as girls, suffer from midsummer madness man may lose his head over a pretty girl, and pay her many attentions, but does not always mean that he wants to marry her. It Is Not Always Love. So don't rush to the conclusion that because your heart beats quickly when certain man looks at you, you are in love with him. Summer is summer, and youth is young, and both are sweet, but together they sometimes make a sad pother of things.

So, once more, little friends, if you are drifting into that sweetest of ports, s it is sweet.

There are doubts and fears, as well the steady beacon of true love lights

Song Of the Ironworker

By ALFRED DAMON RUNYON.

ELL, gentlemen-swell gentlemen-in your frowsy, drowsy clubs, Take note o' me an' Bill McGhee, an' twenty other dubs Who're stuck agin the sky line, like flies agin a wall-Ho, think o' me an' Bill McGhee, an' watch us as we crawl Around the bars, between the stars an' up the shafts o' day; You hear the gang when the hammers clang an' the bullgines hoist away.

Ho, give us a job to fix the moon; to tinker the golden star! Give us a chance an' see us prance along a path o' air! We'il hang for hours by our teeth to the flowers that grow in the turquois An' riffle a seine through the silver rain for the tears that the angels shed!

Aye, gentlemen-high gentlemen-in your frowsy, drowsy clubs, Take note'o' me an' Bill McGhee an' twenty other dubs.

(The half of them are come-one, an' the other half's a scream)-But watch 'em as they sift between the banks o' risin' steam! Towards the clouds, above the crowds, above the dinky town-They follow the flight o' the shafts o' light that God himself send down!

Ho, gentlemen-so, gentlemen-at your masteful, wasteful ease Get on to us an' hear us cuss, an' watch us as we squeeze The girders into decent shape, an' see the graceful way We swing like toy balloons to meet the comin' o' the day! Toward the sky we climb so high; through vacant space we grope-We're anchored there by earnest prayer, with God our chiefest hope!

"So give us a chance to paint the clouds, or prop the fallin' stars; Give us a crack at the milky track, or a job to rivet Mars, bolts- -

We'll can the thunder an' make Jove wender whose stealin' his lightnin' An' step up to Venus, who'll say that she's seen us when we hand her a couple o' jolts!

THE ONE WHO WINS (By Kennett Harris.)

TOU may be almighty clever; you Y may be, in fact, a wonder
With a brain that in its workings never makes a stall or blunder; You may set the world a-gaping with some marvelous invention You may make a grand success of anything you like to mention; You may have an eye that's hawk-like, penetrating and commanding, But you'll not command a stranger with your strength of understanding.

make a great impression,

If upon your fellow creatures you would Put some flesh en. If you're undersized and puny-duodecimo edition-With no sort of brawn or muscle for asserting your position, If you're hatchet-faced and spindling, you must find existence painful, For the world looks on the skinny with an aspect most disdainful. You'll be treated with contumely, scorned, neglected, disregarded, Yes, you'll be turned down a-plenty if your ribs are not well larded. It's the thin folk, you will notice, lack assertion and aggression. Put some flesh on.

It's the close-to-fifty waistband, you will find that's world-controlling. It's the voice that gruffly rumbles, it's the eye that's fiercely rolling, It's the neck that's red and bulging o'er a number eighteen collar. It's the amplitude of shirt-front, you may bet your bottom dollar. When you bellow like a fog-horn and your tread makes windows rattle There will be small need of fighting. You've already won the battle

You will seldom have to struggle for a favor or concession. Put some flesh on.

Reno Has Fire.

Pano Nev. Aug 4 -- An explosion of gasoline in a tailor shop caused a fire Mr. Spreckels said the insurgent movetheir contents valued at about $10,000 the saddle to stay and that he had beand insured for half that amount.

Today and Tomorrow By James B. Harris.

Tomorrow the clouds may gather, And storms sweep over the way, But what care we that such may be If the sun shines bright today?

Tomorrow our hopes may perish, And our portions prove dismay, But while God's light is fair and bright, Let's utilize today.

Tomorrow our lives are ended, And our bodies laid away. let us live. love and forgive While it is yet today.

Dr. W. M. Yandell was run over by a horse this afternoon. Johnny Steffian and bride were rerenaded last night. The directors of the Y. M. C. A. w? meet Thursday night.

Gov. Ahumada of Chibunhua is on his way to Juarez to preside at the laying of the corner stone of the public school building. The first shipment of El Paso grapes for the season was made yesterday. A. P. Coles denies the report that he has leased the Pierson. Z. T. White and Z. B. Clardy have returned from a trip to St. Louis.

There was a refreshing rain last Harry Powers' right hand was injured yesterday at the planing mill

Spreekels an Insurgent. Chicago, Ill., Aug. 4.-Rudolph belief that the new king in any way Spreckels, returning from his conference with Col. Roosevelt in New arrived in Chicago en route to Madison Wis., to see senator R. M. LaFollette which burned three business houses and | ment in the Republican party was in come an insurgent.

King George Of England Never Tried In Matters Of Government Before

XXX-THE BRITISH CRISIS.

King Business Old Trade,

trades in the world. Like other busiwould of his own accord abate one jot or tittle of his royal power. Never has there been a king who did not be lieve in his soul that he was made of Something more than a century ago

there was a great social convulsion in the western world which caused thrones to totter, and which occasioned a terific

slump in the stock of the king business

by striking down the notion that kings ruled by virtue of divine right. This great panic was followed by a long series of ups and downs in which no

king ever knew quite what his business was worth. About 40 years ago things quieted down, and ever since then king-day the king business is more flourishing than at any time within the past 100 years.

Proud to be Subjects.

Absurd as it may seem to those in whose veins runs the blood of men who signed the Declaration of Inde-pendence, subjects of kings are quite as proud of their estate as are citizens of republics. An American will not fail to wince when some careless speaking Englishman refers to him as an "American subject". And yet the Englishman is as prideful of his rela-the American republic. Any person of a republic would be even more of a llcans in Britain, just as there are no nonarchists in America. Every man likes his own system. True, it may be objected that there are republicans in Spain; but then there are also monarchists in France. The trouble in those countries is that the system has changed so many times that the people are

Loyalty First Duty.

The one thing about which every duty, under any and all circumstances whatsoever to be loyal and true to his king. Loyalty to the crown is the only effective bond of British unity. Even

Ireland, forget the sufferings of 750

years of cruel oppression and send messages of devotion and loyalty to the new sovereign. The Hindu revolutionists, too often maligned as anarchists, when King Edward died, gathered in but fove and loyalty for the English

George a Crack Shot.

And the man who has come to occupy this, the greatest throne in all the history of monarchy; the man who has come to rule over this, the greatest empire ever acknowledged by man; the

this world-wide and magnificent loyalty is a man about whom only three of the six best shots in England, he collectors in the world, and he suffers

Kings which decress that the crown prince opposes always the pelitical views of his father. Queen Victoria was popularly believed to be a Tory.

Edward was a Liberal. George, by the Certain it is that most of his friends have ben staunch Tories and George never has exhibited any of those democratic traits which made his father popular outside of his own realm as well as within its borders. George, so all, is an intense Englishman, having far as anything is known of him at the average Englishman's supreme contempt and hearty dislike for all foreigners. His queen, too, is English-the first English princess to sit on the too disilkes and distrusts foreigners.

In his career as Prince of Wales

Believes in Navy.

George made one speech which was tional utterance. It was entitled "Wake up, England!" It was an exposition of which is to say, the Tory party. It is sailor from his childhood until the death of his elder brother, should be t hearty supporter of the navy and a

With respect to the navy, and to Imsympathizes with the Liberal party. As far as the domestic political crisis is concerned, king George's attitude is not telligently. Groping in the dark, one feels rather than sees, that the king wil

oppose, whether actively or passively nown, it may not be guessed at in-

Water school.

the doctrines of the Imperialistic party inevitable that George, having been something more than a mere conven

English throne for many years.

same token, is presumed to be a

There is a general custom amo

one of the greatest postage stamp things are certainly known-he is man who now receives the homage of king.

with dyspepsia.

the Irish, as long as they remain

not settled in their preferences.

tock has ben gradually rising.

better clay than other men.

The king business is one of the oldest

By Frederic J. Haskin

ONDON. England. Aug. 4 .- His to destroy the peculiar privileges of the most excellent majesty, George aristocracy. Obscurity of Prince the Fifth, by the grace of of the United Kingdom of The divinity that doth hedge a king Great Britain and Ireland, and of the is as nothing compared to the obscur-British dominions beyond the seas ity which envelopes an heir apparent. king, defender of the faith, Emperor of | Witness the Prince Imperial of Japan, India, will receive the British crown the crown prince of Austria, or the vice from the Archbishop of Canterbury in president of the United States. Secure in that obscurity, George formed his political notions. He was an interested Westminster Abbey one day next June. This man, of whom the world knows nothing, actually became king that auditor in the galleries of the house of night last May when his father died. commons during the long debates on For eighten years England and the Enthe constitutional crisis last winter. glish knew that this young man some. He heard at first hand the best argu-day would be called to reign over the ments of both sides. But on his face ments of both sides. But on his face vast dominions of the British empire. comprising one-fifth of the world's ter- ally concealed his emotions. If he ever ritory and one-fifth of the world's incommunicated his comments on that deabitants. But the British people never bate to any living soul, the English inquired what manner of man he might people do not know it. Here is the ancient kingdom of Enge; they never asked him for his opinlons as to matter of governmental policy; they never questioned his fitland in the throes of a great constitu-tional crisis, the issue of which probabness for the high office he was desly wil change forever the course tined to fill; they knew only that he was of royal race and that he would British affairs. The opposing sides are nesses it has had its ups and downs; it the future of England depends upon the has been popular and its tradesmen have success of its doctrines, will be willing ruled or ruined at their august pleasto defer their judgment, or perhaps to the prejudices, of this unknown and lined up in battle array, all ready for the fight, waiting only until their new king may get his crown, before invoking the arbitrament of political war.

And yet both sides, each believing that ure; it has been unpopular and tradesmen have paid with their lives unknowable man the penalty of their kingship. Kings King's Will Is Law. have been the inspired and consecrated The leaders of both parties know that agents of the Deity in ruling the morhe king's will may not be opposed, untals of this inferior world; kings have ess the king should violate his pledges been the pawns in games played by great to the people. If he shall let it be known, without personally meddling in soldiers, diplomatists and priests; kings have been mere figureheads to reprethe political situation, that he favors sent in mortal flesh the immortal and intangible spirit of a national existthe continuation of the present relations between the lords and the comence. But always kings have been kings, mons, his will probably will prevail and never has there been a king who

Abe Martin

Ignorance gives a feller away quicker than a celluloid collar. It's no trouble t' do a fine credit business.

And yet the British people would not permit him to take an active part in party politics, for to do so would be o violate the best traditions of English kings and would forfeit him the respect of his people.

Perhaps if George is the Tory that many believe him to be, he will save the aristocracy its privileges, and block the attack of a militant democracy, by appealing to all the people not to do anything that will embarrass him. It is an apparent certainty that the Liberals cannot win in their fight against the house of lords unless the king will give Mr. Asquith the power to name a

(Continued on Page Seven.)

A Question Of Inches

Daily Short Story

The Herald's

SHE lived next door to me. A hedge of brier rose was the sole barrier be-tween our respective gardens. Sometween our respective gardens. Sometimes, when the hedge was not too we held conversation across it, and her face was the fairest rose of all as it smiled at me between the leaves; but more often than not she would conce into my garden and sit best to my chair and talk to me, for I am a cripple, though, as this story is not mine, I will not weary you with a recital of the acci-I grew fond of the little girl next

No, there are no conclusions to be fumped at. I am 50, and my hair ts gray; and she is one and twenty was one morning in early June when I saw the glimmer of narthrough the rose-hedge, and heard the click of the gate. I had been expecting her, seeing that shortly beiers I had seen poor Bob Hillyer's dejected she ders pass my gate and vanish down the tion as a subject of King George as any American, he he lefterson Brick himself, could be of his citizenship in sunny road. He had been "refused" for the second time as I had known he would be, sort of defiance in her voice, "when he but experience has taught me the use-England who agitated the everthrow of [ the monarchy and the establishment She came up my garden path with a added, trying to speak playfully.

advocate making a certain citizen into King Theodore I. There are no repub-I looked at her critically; she looked rather disturbed, but certainly not "The man is a fool," I said quietly.

She looked startled, and not particularly pleased. r proposing to me??" she asked. "Of course-" said I.

"Why?" Rye tried to look dignifiedit was a failure. "Because he might have known be-Briton is agreed is that it is his first forehand that you would refuse him," I said evenly. "I have told him over so many times that I don't want to be married," she assured me engerly.

> She flushed up. "What do you mean?" she demanded. night, and I think I must have fallen "I mean," I said, "that if you told Bob Hillyer the truth you would say, 'I am | find it nearly dark, and to too short, and too quiet, and too much state to express in ceremonial solemnity everything I don't admire in a man."

"In fact," I added serenely, the sorrow of the 300,000,000 subjects of the Kaiser-i-Hind. There may be bitmerely a question of inches. But looks burg's. ter politics, and even bloody violence are not everything." in protest against the constituted Brit-"I never said they were," she replied, ish government, but there is nothing "But you think so," said I, expecting instant annihilation. "And that's why am going to tell you that Hillyer's little finger is worth more than the handsome six feet something that goes by the name of Goeffry Wyburg." Another sitence, then Rye laughed. not very naturally. "Are you jealous of him, too?" she asked. "Isn't it rather an insult to accuse people of being jealous of a tailor's Rye grew scarlet, there were tears of vexation in her eyes. "He's the handsomest man in the country," she declared. "And you know

"My dear, I never denied it," said L. "But you could put his brain on a three penny piece, and he hasn't the heart of a mouse. It isn't always the biggest men who have the biggest hearts-and Bob Hillyer-"Oh, I'm siek of hearing about Pob."

she burst in. Father never loses chance to tell me that he is the finest fellow in the world, and mother says that she loves him like her own son; but he never will be, in spite of that they say," declared Rye.

I maintained a discreet slience, chiefly because I differed from her, and it did not seem quite a propitious moment in which to say so. "Of course," she submitted with sarcasm, "we all know that Bob is rich-"And we all know," I added, "thatwhat is far better-he has a heart of "I dan't believe in betting," she an-notinced, throwing away the last petal decapitated flower. should like to have a little one with "Delighted," said L. "Will you have gloves or chocolates?

"Gloves-six pairs, and my size is small fives." seemed confident of winning. "And if you lose?" I asked.

She laughted again-very confidently believer in the doctrines of the Blue I had seen young Wyburg kiss her at the gate a few night back, and supposed—to put it vulgarly—she was backing herself to win, on the strength perialism, it is possible to guess that George is an ardent Tory. There is no of that. But a kiss does not of necesthing upon which one may base a sity mean riding to win; sometimes a man kisses and rides away. "If I lose," she told me with impudent emphasis, "I will give you-"

"A kiss?" I asked smiling.

"You shall have two," she announced with great generosity. "If I lose She held out her small hand, and I the efforts of the British democracy took it to seal the compact

Wyburg kissed her at the gate that

They made a pretty picture, I watched them through the rose-hedge, and I could not but admit that they were 4 charming picture.

Rye called to me through the hedge the next morning. "Bob has gone away," she said. "Sensible fellow," said I. "No do he'll soon find another lady-love.

Rye shock her head with delightful "I am afraid he won't," she said. "He's the sort of man who takes things badly.

was rather hard on Wyburg, but then my fear was that Rye was riding And I was right. His visits to hose Cottage suddenly Rye said he had gone to London on business. I suppose she read disbellef in my

"When he comes back," she said, a lessness of arguing with a man in love. | right-and I shall have my gloves," she "He's coming back this evening," said

I looked up from my book, and mentally noted that she was wearing a new frock. "So I observe," I said. She looked down at her dress, it was blue, like her eyes, and blushed. I had had a letter from Bib Hillyer that morning, and it had told me some-thing that had disquieted me something to do with Wyburg and a lady from the chorus of a musical comedy and a registrar's office. "Hillyer returns tonight as well." I sald. But Rye evinced no interest, and after ssured me engerly.

"Quite so." I admitted. "But that evident that her thoughts were not with me, she took herself off.

sat out in the garden late that into a doze, for I woke with a start to not going to marry you because you are sound of voices from over the hedge. They were both men's voices-one, I knew to be Bob Hillyer's, and the other

-after a moment, I recognized as Wy-The latter was speaking rather loudly and rather nervously. "Didn't expect to meet you here, Hillyer. .

is, I just came along to tell Rye the Perhaps you've heard, I fancy it's in the papers—but Rye and I have been such friends—" He broke off. 1 thought of the kisses at the gate, the night the nightingale sang in the trees. "You mean," said Hillyer, "that you have come to tell her about our His voice was delightfully

"Yes, the-the-er-fact is, Hillyer, I-I'm rather fraid she'll cut up a bit rough. You know what girls are, andand-And then Hillyer's voice cut the silence like a knife.

"I'm afraid I don't understand what sible interest Miss Farlane could have in you, Wyburg, seeing that she is

If the moon had fallen out of the sky on to my lawn, I could not have been more thunderstruck than I was at that moment.

Rye engaged to Bob Hillyer. Why. only that morning—suddenly the truth dawned upon me—and I knew that Hillver had only said what he had to save

I raised myself on my elbow, and peered at the two men through the rosehedge. I was near enough to see them moon, and to me, in that moment, In spite of his splendld inches, Wyburg seemed the veriest pigmy, as he stood, speechlessly looking at the man before Hillyer might be short, plain, uninof him, and I wished with all my heart scene, even as I had been, and that she might at last see for herself what she was throwing away.

But in the morning a note came for me from the house next door.

"I am going away," wrote Rve in a "I can't come to say 'Good-bye' to you, because I am so ashamed. I was in the garden last night hiding behind the bushes, and I heard what I know you must have heard. "And the best thing that could have happened," I said aloud. Rye stayed away nearly a month, and then, one afternoon when I was dozing under the trees in the garden, I heard steps across the lawn. I knew whose they ere, and I kept my eyes closed. They came close to me, quite near, and may forehead. I had won the bet.